VOL. LXII., No. 7. NEW YORK, August 16, 1902. WHOLE No. 1594

Oddest among all odd books is THE STORY OF A STRANGE CAREER. Being the Autobiography of a Convict. It is an authentic document, edited by Stanley Waterloo. The author was a criminal, serving a term in a Western penitentiary. Although of good family and education, he was nevertheless a degenerate, swerving naturally into the downward path. He gives many graphic and interesting descriptions of his adventures on a whaler in South America; on a British man-of-war; in the American navy; at Fort Fisher; in Confederate prisons during the civil war; and in the New York draft riots. It is a strong and rugged picture of the life of a "soldier of fortune." (12mo, Cloth, $1.20 net; postage 12 cents additional.)

London critics have agreed that Gilbert Parker's place among living novelists is in the front rank; King Edward has recognized his genius by investing him with the honors of knighthood; the American press declares his popularity permanent; therefore his forthcoming work, DONOVAN PASHA, and Some People of Egypt, is the work of a master and bears the impress of a master's hand. Ready in September. (12mo, Cloth, Colored Frontispiece, $1.50.)

The Boston Transcript says the "TOWN AND COUNTRY LIBRARY has come to be the hall mark of good reading, insomuch that any book which bears the now familiar label can be opened with a certainty of satisfaction." Nor need anything more than this unsolicited statement be said of the new volume (No. 315) entitled TALES ABOUT TEMPERAMENTS, by John Oliver Hobbes. Both the author and the publication are a guaranty of superior work. (Cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.)

A Speckled Bird

By AUGUSTA EVANS WILSON

Author of "St. Elmo," "Infelice," "Vashti," "At the Mercy of Tiberius," etc.

The sixteen years that have elapsed since the publication of Mrs. Augusta Evans Wilson's last work, "At the Mercy of Tiberius," have made her retirement appear as final. The appearance, therefore, of "A Speckled Bird" comes in the nature of a surprise, and this surprise is sure to deepen, with the discovery that in this new novel the author's imagination blossoms forth with all the glow and glamour that took the public captive in "St Elmo" thirty odd years ago, and still works a spell as potent upon the generation of to-day.

There is in this new novel a gain in breadth of view which brings this remarkable woman quite into touch with the present time and the things that have occupied the thinking world since she last laid down her pen.

As with all her previous novels, the scenes of this story are laid mainly in the South, and in it Mrs. Wilson gives full reign to her genius as a born story teller. It is rich in movement, local color, and contrast of sentiment, and some of the types presented are unlike any found in the author's previous books. Incidentally, the conditions of the South, and the state of Southern feeling during the Reconstruction are brought into effective play. The dramatic situations are strong, and the love complexities intense. It is the hatred of her father by her grandmother's neighbors, and the reflection of this in their attitude towards the heroine of the story, placing her in the parable light of the Scriptural Speckled Bird, that gives name to the story.

It stands in the highest rank of modern fiction, and will command the largest sale of any novel of the year.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE GRAPHOLOGY PUBLISHING CO., 503 Fifth Avenue, New York, have just published a work on "Reading Character from Handwriting," a handbook of graphology for experts, students and laymen, by Dr. Hugo von Hagen. The book contains facsimiles of numerous specimens of handwriting and autographs and a portrait of the author.

THE G. W. DILLINGHAM CO. will publish on September 5 Denslow's "Night Before Christmas," of which a large edition has already been taken up. They will publish shortly the following novels: "The Cromptons," by Mary J. Holmes; "The Day of Prosperity," by Paul De Vinne; "The Iron Brigade," by General Charles King; "Michel Gulpe," by Everit Bogert Terhune; also, "The Kiss of Glory," by Grace Duffie Boylan.

LOTHROP PUBLISHING COMPANY have just ready "Stepping Stones," a volume of helpful practical talks for both sexes, by Dr. O. S. Marden; "The Admiral's Aid," a story of life in the new navy, by Chaplain H. H. Clark, U. S. N., written in a way to interest both young and old readers; also, "Chanticleer," an idyll of modern life, by Violette Hall, an essayist of unusual charm and ability—the sister of Gertrude Hall, well known as a writer of prose and verse.

THE C. M. CLARK PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish on September 10 Charles Felton Pidgin's new book, "The Climax." As already noted, the author intends this to be a light, pleasing, fanciful story of the climax in Aaron Burr's life as it might have been had Burr been elected Governor of New York at the time he aspired to that office. Mr. Pidgir imagines Burr to have succeeded, and then has him elected to the Presidential chair and become known as the great President General and a mighty conqueror—the Napoleon of the Western hemisphere. The book has a frontispiece illustration.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have in preparation a new story by Henry James, entitled "The Wings of the Dove," which, it is said, is free from the author's "manner of abstract and psychological involution;" "The Shadow of the Rope," by E. W. Hornung, a novel of English life, the hero of which has many of the traits of character of the author's "Raffles;" "Jeb Hutton," the story of a Georgian boy, and "Out of Gloucester," a story of the Gloucester fisherman of to-day, both by James B. Connolly; also, a new edition of "Mountaineering in the Sierra Nevada," by the late Clarence King, a classic of humor, of romantic adventure and of nature descriptions.

D. APPLETON & Co. have in press three notable autobiographies, among which the one by George Francis Train is bound to have considerable attraction for readers on both sides of the Atlantic. Mr. Train, ship and railroad builder, merchant and agitator, has been for more than thirty years a picturesque figure in America and England. He has visited every State of the Union, and has made his home in many. For years he made his headquarters in Madison Square, New York City, and for a few years past he has lived in the Mills Hotel, No. 1, a first-class ten-cent lodging house. His book is entitled "My Life in Many States and in Foreign Lands, written in the Mills Hotel in my seventy-fourth year." The other two autobiographies are "The Romance of My Childhood and Youth," by Mme. Adam, (Juliette Lamber,) and "The Story of a Strange Career, being the autobiography of a convict," edited by Stanley Waterloo, both of which have already been described by us.

See note, "Weekly Record," P. W., December 20, 1890 [986.] From the legends of the Columbia River and the mystical "bridge of the gods," the author has derived a realistic picture of the powerful tribes that inhabited the Oregon country two centuries ago. The tragic fate of the young minister who came from New England to convert the Indians is the climax of a story in which savage superstitions and Christian courage struggle for mastery.

"This account of the feudal régime forms the first chapter in the second volume of the 'Histoire générale du IV. Siecle à nos Jours,' edited by M. M. Lavisse and Rambaud. It is now done into English in the hope that it may be useful as a short description of the social organization prevailing in Europe, especially from the tenth to the thirteenth century. It seems particularly fitted for collateral reading in high school and college classes in history, and at the same time it may prove of interest outside the schools."—Preface.

Wisser, J: P. The tactics of coast defense. Kansas City, Mo., Hudson-Kimberly Publishing Co., [1902.] c. 232 p. O. cl., $2.

The present work is the outcome of lectures delivered by Major Wisser at the Naval War College and at Cornell University, Ithaca, and of five years of study on the tactics of coast defense, supplementary to nearly twenty years of study of tactics in general. The chapters treat of principles of strategy and tactics involved in coast defense, armament, sites for batteries and forts, coast artillery material, organization of coast artillery, instruction and training, battle tactics of coast defense, etc. List of books and articles consulted (2 p.).

The present issue of the [English] Reference Catalogue of Current Literature is even bulkier than its immediate forerunner, and contains the complete or abridged lists of one hundred and seventy-nine publishers. A notable fact is the increase in colonial and foreign houses who have inserted their catalogues, thus further enhancing the utility of the publication. The Index now extends to seven hundred and ninety-eight pages, containing an aggregate of one hundred and thirty-five thousand entries, an increase on that of the last edition of two hundred and twenty-two pages, and comprising nearly thirty-eight thousand additional references. Every book contained in the "Reference Catalogue" will be found in the Index, under title, subject and author.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

THE GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE, Washington, D. C., has just published for the Library of Congress, (Division of Bibliography,) a "List of References on Reciprocity [in] Books, Articles in Periodicals and Congressional Documents," compiled by A. P. C. Griffin, Chief of Division of Bibliography. No effort has been made to cover the entire literature of the subject, but to present a suggestive list of authorities. The references are largely to discussions of the subject. (38 p. 8°, cl.)

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., has just issued a "Catalogue of the Public Documents of the Fifty-fifth Congress and of other departments of the Government of the United States for the period from July 1, 1897, to June 30, 1899." This is the fourth volume of the "Comprehensive Index," and contains in addition to the documents and reports submitted to Congress during the period named all publications of the executive departments, bureaus and offices of the government issued during the two fiscal years 1897-1899. The compilation was begun under the supervision of Miss Mary A. Hartwell and finished under that of Miss Alice C. Fichtenkam. (1070 p. 4°, cl.)

BULLETIN 26 of the Bureau of American Ethnology, which is about ready, is the first issued of a new series recently authorized by Congress. The initial number of the new series is 25, "Natick-English and English-Natick Dictionary," by James Hammond Trumbull, which will be ready for distribution within a few weeks. Number 27, "Tsimshian Texts," recorded and translated by Franz Boas, is in press; several others are in preparation, including a new edition of the "Introduction to the Study of Indian Languages," by J. W. Powell, and the "Diccionario de Motul," an extended dictionary of the Maya language, revised by the late Dr. Berendt and afterward by the late Dr. Brinton, and now undergoing final revision by Señor Andomaro Molina, of Merida, Yucatan. The "Cyclopedia of Indian Tribes" is well advanced. It has been arranged to send one or more volumes to press for publication in Bulletin form during the current year. The Nineteenth Annual Report for 1897-1898, in two parts, is now in the bindery and will be published shortly.

AS TO "BOOK TRUSTS."

EVER since the formation of the two trade associations and the carrying into effect of their rules that are intended to recover for the book trade what it has been in danger of losing altogether—its honorable position as a commercial and educational element in the community—there has been much unconsidered and silly talk about the danger of the "book trust." Especially has this cry been raised lately by a Western daily and an Eastern trade paper over the enforcement by the American Booksellers' Association of Reform Resolution No. 1, which calls for the exclusion of the books of a publishing house that refuses to co-operate in maintaining prices. In this cry the standpoint of the American Publishers' Association and the standpoint of the American Booksellers' Association are confused, and the action of the Booksellers' Association is treated from a point of view that is, to say the least, based upon a misconception. As all who are interested and informed on the subject know, the objective point of both associations is the same; but the individual action of each must be judged by itself. The publishers may elect to obtain results by one course and the booksellers decide to gain their point by another; yet each would resist most emphatically were the action of one association judged by the action of the other.

As to the charge of "combination" or "trust," in the sense of a consolidation of certain large interests to exterminate competition, nothing could be more absurd than to apply the term to the present movement for reform in the book trade. It is certainly no "combination" to publish books at prices that can be trusted; it is no "combination" to make such retail prices as allow a living profit to those who earn it by their calling; it is no "combination" to deny the privilege of discount to one who abuses it to the detriment of that calling; it is no "combination" to abolish a system of inflated prices, calculated to inveigle weak-minded persons with imaginary deductions and bargains; it is no "combination" to decline being a party to the baiting game as practised by the underseller; it is no "combination" to decline giving the underseller free advertising in the bargain, for it is the very advertising of the publisher that forms the freshest bait; it is no "combination" to refuse to discredit one's legitimate agents by underselling them over their heads; it is no "combination" to protest against being discredited one's self by having one's own prices given the lie; it is no "combination" to put a stop to pernicious practices that have dragged down the book trade to the lowest level of cheap-John fakirs; it is, in brief, no "combination" to adhere to principles which alone can restore the confidence of the trade and public.

Let us for once have our say on this misapplied word "trust" ever flung at us when it is simply a question of fair dealing; let us say that this clamor against the so-called "book trust" is nothing but the baldest jingoism, intended to deceive people and to excuse crooked business. If simple adherence to sane business principles is a "trust" or "combination," then, on the same theory, the common practice invariably resorted to by ignorance or recklessness is a "trust," but a "combination" as corrupt and disreputable as the action of the book trade associations to reform its business methods is sound and honorable. For the "liberal art" of underselling—the lowest and cheapest trick of the trade—is as easy as sucking eggs; it needs no professional training, no tried business experience, no solid investment, no hard work and application, no devotion to a calling, no respect for the usages of the trade, no regard for the rights of others, no conscience, no pride, no principle. On the contrary; for the possession of any one positive quality would disqualify for successful underselling. The art of underselling, in short, is the art of living on the industry and enterprise of others. It was to correct these evils and to limit the depredations on honest trading, and not for restraint of trade in any sense of the word, that the book trade combined. To obfuscate its intentions by libelling this movement as a "trust" is not only malicious but silly.

THE AMERICAN NEWSPAPER.

William S. Rossiter, expert special agent of the Census Bureau, according to the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, has prepared a report of unusual interest on printing and publishing in the United States in the last decade. The statistics he has gathered show that there has been no radical change in the gathering of news or in the management and scope of daily newspapers. One characteristic of the decade, however, was the great increase in the quantity of news published. "Partly because of the ambitious and progressive spirit of the period," says Mr. Rossiter, "and partly because of the lavish expenditures of capital made by reorganized or newly-established publications in order to break into the patronage of prosperous competitors and secure a foothold, the dailies of the great cities became the purveyors of the news of the world to an extent never before attempted. In many cases—especially in New York City—it was freely admitted that this expediture was carried beyond the boundaries of business prudence."

On the subject of the principal sources of newspaper income and expenditures Mr. Rossiter says:

"By 1900 it had become customary for large advertisers to form combinations; it is said that the patronage of fewer than twenty advertisers forms more than half the total quantity of advertising appearing in the daily newspapers of New York City. The only new source of income in the field of advertising was found in newcomers—principally tobaccos, whiskeys, cereals and books. Of these interests the publisher, formerly the most conservative advertiser, became the most daring. The professional advertising agent might be termed another cause of loss to the daily papers to the amount of commissions exacted. Between the opposing perplexities of competition and combinations of the advertisers there has been a decline in the advertising earning power of leading newspapers.

"After passing 300,000 circulation the value of advertising becomes a race between the receipts from that source and the cost of white paper. The advertising in one of the New York evening papers, with circulation much exceeding 300,000, was recently declared to entail a cost of 21 cents per line for white paper. Evidently the publisher who secures a circulation of huge proportions confronts the necessity of securing from his advertising patrons a return of the cost of the paper space which they occupy, with a margin of profit. For reasons already noted, the profit is in many cases uncertain, and, as the decade drew to a close, for certain newspapers in the great cities a new problem arose. The population had become so vast, and means of communication with surrounding territory so easy, that systematic search for circulation had been rewarded by enormous sales, the penalty for which was reduction or complete wiping out of profits on advertising. The circulation ball, once in motion, is not easy to stop, and the serious nature of this problem appeared when the cost of white paper threatened to exceed the return from the advertiser. At the close of the decade such a possibility confronted several American daily newspapers. Overcirculation necessitated also an increase in capital invested in plant, with the added burden of interest which it represented.

"It may be said, therefore, that at the close of the decade from 1890 to 1900 the daily newspaper was more of a public institution than ever before, because it sacrificed an increased share of its revenue for the public benefit, obtaining no compensating financial return from either purchaser or advertiser. This was a condition very much to the advantage of the public, but one which tended to periods of reduced dividends in those establishments appearing to be most prosperous. Daily publications suffered from the rage for enlarged business and narrow profits so characteristic of all industries during the decade, but the relief which other callings found in combinations was not open to the publishers of daily newspapers, because the inequalities of circulation forever make combinations of newspapers impossible. Prosperity for the daily newspaper clearly lies in a middle course, if conditions permit, with respect to both news and circulation. The changes which occurred in weekly publications during the last decade were not such as to merit more than passing consideration."

SCOTTISH HISTORICAL PRINTING.

The Edinburgh Bibliographical Society is at present engaged upon a work of importance to all interested in the history of printing. Six years ago, says a writer in the Glasgow Herald, the society resolved to begin the compilation of a bibliographical catalogue of books, etc., published in Scotland before 1700. The direction of the work was undertaken by H. G. Aldis, now of the University Library, Cambridge, in whose hands the material has accumulated to such an extent that the title-slips now number about 3500. In order to facilitate further progress, and to enable contributors to know what titles are still unrecorded or defective, it has been decided to issue a preliminary hand-list of one-line titles, which it is hoped will soon be in the hands of the printer. This hand-list will consist of about 150 quarto pages, and will contain the titles arranged in chronological order, followed by a list of the printers and booksellers and an index of authors, etc. The main object in printing the list is that copies may be distributed to bibliographers and others who have opportunities of furthering the completion of the bibliography, and who may be willing to send in additional information.

But beyond the particular purpose it is intended to serve, the list will form a useful record of Scottish printing of the period dealt with. At present there is no formal history of printing in Scotland during the seventeenth century. Dickson's and Edmond's admirable "Annals of Scotland Printing" comes down only to 1600, and a knowledge of what was being done by Scottish printers during the next hundred years can only be picked up, slowly and laboriously, from such books as Watson's preface or Mr. Edmond's volume on the Aberdeen printers, or a recondite work with the unpromising title of Lee's "Memorial for the Bible Societies of Scotland." Despite a few works printed at Stirling and St. Andrews, and possibly by John Scot, at Dundee, in the sixteenth century, it was only in the next century that printing was generally practiced outside Edinburgh.

COMMUNICATIONS.

TO DESIGNATE SIZES OF BOOKS BY THE METRIC SYSTEM.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: Your editorial of August 2 calling attention to the strong recommendation of the international congress of publishers that the size of books be given in cm. leads me to remind American publishers that in 1876 a strong committee of librarians was appointed to investigate this matter thoroughly. Their report was that the best method of giving size was to "give the size" in cm. Every few years from that time to this some committee or body has taken up the subject afresh, the last one being the special committee of the American Library Association in revising the rules in connection with the Library of Congress for the printed catalogue cards. It is significant that thorough investigation each time reaches exactly the same result. Is it not the part of wisdom to get rid of the present lack of system and adopt at once what is bound to be the international method? The other reports have sometimes given height without width and one proposition was to give the nearest half cm., a refinement quite unnecessary except for bibliographic rarities. It is enough to give the nearest height in cm. of the uncut page or of the squares of the bound book followed by the width if greater accuracy is desired, and always if the book is square or oblong, the height and width being separated preferably by x instead of by a dash as in your editorial. As I have served on several of these committees I know that the variation you comment on is not a real one. If we give exact measurements there can be no discrepancy in systems. The scheme made by our committee 25 years ago which THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has used was based on actual measurement of hundreds of volumes, but in drawing the dividing line between sizes some arbitrary point had to be chosen which would seem large for the smaller size and small for the larger. With the adoption of the cm. system, however, the whole world would be in harmony, there could be no mistake and it would be much easier for laymen to undertsand the kind of book they were getting to see the height in cm. than to see the conventional 8°, 12°, etc.

I take exception to your statement also that "the march of reform is delayed by the present unsettled status of the metric system." This was never so firmly established as now, and Congress recently passed a bill making it obligatory in this country and then reconsidered it, not from doubt as to the wisdom, but in order to give a little more time for consideration. Those most familiar with the subject have no doubt that this action will soon be taken. Nearly all the civilized world has long been using the metric system as its only measure, and the people who declaim against it have been silent many years. Even those who for some fanciful reason do not like it admit that it is inevitably to be universal. The book trade should co-operate with librarians in dropping one and forever the size letters O, D, S, etc., and the old fold symbols 8°, 12°, 16°, etc., and hereafter record size by giving size in the international measures.

MELVIL DEWEY.

POSTAL MATTERS.

THE REDEMPTION OF UNCANCELLED POSTAL CARDS.

THE postoffice department has called a halt and revoked the recent order which was to go in effect August 1, providing for the redemption of uncancelled postal cards, pending the decision of the attorney-general as to the legality of such a course. The order is held up because some one called the attention of the postmaster-general to that clause in the law which reads: "No postmaster shall sell or dispose of stamps in any manner except for cash, under penalty of a fine or imprisonment."

OBITUARY NOTES.

JAMES JOSEPH JACQUES TISSOT, the artist, and illustrator of "The Life of Christ," brought out in this country by the S. S. McClure Company and McClure, Phillips & Co., the originals of which are in the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, died in Paris, August 9. He was born at Nantes, France, on October 15, 1836.

DR. MARTIN LUTHER HOLBROOK, an old friend in the book trade, died at his home, No. 46 East Twenty-first Street, New York, August 12, after a lingering illness. Dr. Holbrook was born in Mantua, Portage Co., Ohio, February 3, 1831, of a New England family whose ancestors were among the first to settle in the Western Reserve. Brought up as a farmer, he studied in the Ohio Agricultural College, and was for three years editor of The Ohio Farmer. He began to take an interest in hygiene and medicine, and late in the fifties became a practicing physician. In 1861-'63 he was associated with Dr. Dio Lewis in Boston in his propaganda of physical culture and hygiene and the introduction of the Lewis system into the schools of various cities. In 1864 Dr. Holbrook came to New York City and became a member of the firm of Miller, Wood & Holbrook, publishers of medical books and The Herald of Health, of which paper Dr. Holbrook remained editor until 1898. During the war he had much to do with army sanitation. About that time, too, his firm established the first Turkish bath in New York City, in Laight Street, close to their place of business. The place was headquarters for writers and physicians interested in advocating what were then regarded as mere theories as to hygiene, but to-day are accepted and applied by most practitioners. He was one of the earliest advocates in the United States of the kindergarten system. As a writer of many medical treatises and as editor for twenty-four years Dr. Holbrook gained pre-eminence as a teacher of ways and means to prevent and protect against disease rather than merely to cure it. His published works include "Hygiene of the Brain and Cure of Nervousness," "Eating for Strength," "Parturition Without Pain," "Liver Complaint," "Mental Dyspepsia and Headache," "Chastity," "Marriage and Parentage," "Hygienic Treatment of Consumptives," "Stirpiculture," etc. Dr. Holbrook's wife, Lucy Lee Holbrook, an artist and conspicuous member of Sorosis, died several years ago.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The New York Times has acquired the triangle bounded by Broadway, West Forty-second Street and Seventh Avenue, in New York City, and will at once begin the erection thereon of a large modern steel construction building primarily for its own use. It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy early in 1904. In the nearly fifty-one years of its existence the New York Times has thus far occupied four different buildings on three sites. The first of these, in 1851, was at 113 Nassau Street. The second was at the northeast corner of Nassau and Beekman Streets. The third was the one whereon the newspaper is now published. Two buildings in succession have been erected on the present site, the first in 1857 and the second in 1888.

BUSINESS NOTES.

BEEVILLE, TEX.—Miss Bobbitt Barclay has opened a book and news stand here.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—Walter R. Miller & Co. have rented the block at 170 Washington Street, and will change their quarters from 82 and 84 State Street to the new store early in October.

BOSTON, MASS.—The Federal Book Company has been incorporated, under the laws of New Jersey, to acquire the publishing business of the James H. Lamb Company, at 372 Boylston Street. The concern is capitalized at $100,000. The incorporators are Ernest H. Johnson, A. Moriarty, and Clarence B. Benedict.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—H. J. Shoemaker, a well-known insurance man, has bought the Palmetto Bookstore, which has been conducted by J. H. Carlisle, Jr., and J. W. Bishop. The store will be continued at the old location by Mr. Shoemaker.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—C. B. Huggins, bookseller, has sold out.

VALDOSTA, GA.—C. S. Bondurant will open a bookstore here.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

HENRY A. DICKERMAN & SON, Boston, will publish a parody of "The Story of Mary MacLane," under the title of "The Story of Lizzie McGuire."

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. have in preparation a volume of verse taken from the pages of Life, to be entitled "Rhymes and Roundelays." The book will be liberally illustrated.

CLARKE CONWELL, (The Elston Press,) Pelham Road, New Rochelle, N. Y., has in preparation a special edition of Pope's "The Rape of the Lock," limited to 160 copies. The other eleven issues of this press are quite out of print.

D. C. HEATH & Co. will publish shortly Goldoni's "Il Vero Amico," one of the most entertaining easy Italian comedies, arranged with notes and vocabulary by Professor Geddes and Professor Josselyn, of Boston University.

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY have in preparation a prose work by Alfred Austin, the poet laureate, entitled "Haunts of Ancient Peace," in which the author describes several places of that "restful charm" which he has depicted in his poems.

HERBERT S. STONE & Co. have just published "Castle Craneycrow," a new story by George Barr McCutcheon, the author of "Graustark." The first edition of 50,000 was exhausted on the day of publication and another edition is being made ready.

CORYELL & Co., 61 Chambers Street, New York, call attention to their large line of standards, neatly printed on good paper, and attractively bound in cloth, half leather and half calf. There are upwards of forty-one different sets that may be offered as illustrated, library or popular editions.

THE OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS will publish shortly, in three small volumes for school use, "Graduated Lessons on the Old Testament," by the Rev. U. Z. Rule. The work has been edited by the Rev. L. J. M. Bebb, principal of St. David's College, Lampeter. Mr. Rule has followed the text of the Revised Version, and has called special attention to the moral and religious lessons which may be drawn from the history.

DODD, MEAD & Co. will publish next month "The Life of James Martineau," who was probably the most conspicuous metaphysician of his day, prepared by the Rev. James Drummond and Dr. Charles B. Upton, the former of whom succeeded Dr. Martineau as principal of Manchester New College. They will also publish next month "The Blood-Tax," a military romance of to-day, by Dorothea Gerard, author of "One Year." The scene is laid in Germany.

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY will publish shortly what they call an "unfictitious novel," entitled "A Chinese Quaker," by Nellie Blessing Eyster. It is really the story of a Chinaman who as a boy was brought up by a young Quaker woman and became a consistent Friend. He is now a high mandarin at the head of large enterprises in China and a Quaker still. Incidentally the story makes appalling revelations of woman slavery on our Pacific Coast.

JOHN LANE announces a new book by Constance Maud, author of "Wagner's Heroines," etc., entitled "Heroines of Poetry;" "New Letters and Memorials of Jane Welch Carlyle," with illustrations, portraits and facsimiles; and an edition of Kenneth Grahame's "Dream Days," with ten full-page illustrations by Maxfield Parrish. Mr. Lane will bring out early in September a novel entitled "Love with Honor," by Charles Marriott, author of "The Column."

THE CENTURY COMPANY has in preparation a new nature book entitled "Caterpillars and Their Moths," by Ida Mitchell and Caroline Gray Soule, which represents the result of more than twenty years spent in studying and rearing moths. The illustrations are made from photographs and show the actual size. They have in preparation a new "Topsy and Turvy" book, made up of selections from Peter Newell's two previous books, published in 1893 and 1894, both of which are out of print.

THOMAS W. LAWSON, of Boston, the builder of Independence, a rejected aspirant to defend the America's cup, has published for private circulation a work entitled "The Lawson History of the America's Cup," which is characterized as "a preliminary to a long and expensive legal struggle to assert his right to defend the America's cup should other challenges come from foreign yachtsmen." In preparing this book Mr. Lawson was assisted by Winfield M. Thompson, who has written the history of the cup. The edition consists of 3000 copies, printed in sumptuous style.

LITTLE, BROWN & Co. have in press a volume of essays by Captain A. T. Mahan, entitled "Retrospect and Prospect," which will contain articles on "The Development of Political Feeling and Outlook in the United States During the Last Decade," "Effect of the War in South Africa on the Prestige of the British Empire," "Motives to Imperial Federation," "Conditions Influencing the Distribution of Navies," "The Relation of the Persian Gulf to World Politics," and "The Military Rule of Obedience."

D. APPLETON & Co. have in preparation an important book of travel in Hesketh Pritchard's "Through Patagonia." It presents the results of an exhaustive tour of this still uncharted antarctic land, which Mr. Pritchard was led to make by his curiosity concerning an animal that was said to be extinct. He found its bones and its skin, but no living specimen. He did, however, discover many facts of scientific and popular interest about the country. The volume will be extensively illustrated in color by John G. Millais.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have in preparation a new book by Cyrus Townsend Brady, entitled "Woven with the Ship," with illustrations by Christy, Leyendecker, Glackens, Parkhurst and Crawford; a work on the "Home Life of the Borneo Head-Hunters," by Dr. W. H. Furness, 3d, who lived for a while among the Borneoese, which will be illustrated by almost 100 heliotypes reproduced from photographs; a work on the volcanic disturbances at Mt. Pelee, by Professor Angelo Heilprin, who descended the burning mountain soon after its outburst; also, a revised edition of the Variorum edition of "Macbeth," first published nearly thirty years ago.

THE BURROWS BROTHERS COMPANY, Cleveland, Ohio, will publish shortly a reprint of "Wolley's Journal: a two-years' Journal in New York and part of its territories in America." This is a reprint of the 1701 edition, originally issued in reprint as No. 2 of Gowan's "Bibliotheca Americana" during 1860. Wolley's has long been considered one of the rarest books in the English language which in any way relate to New York, and in this particular even surpasses Denton's "Brief Description," just published by this house as No. 1 of their "B. B." Reprints. Professor Edward Gaylord Bourne, of Yale, has written for this issue a delightfully lucid and valuable historical introduction.

E. P. DUTTON & Co. will publish at once a critical study by Henry Vignaud, first secretary of the United States Embassy at Paris, of the letter and chart of Toscanelli on the route to the Indies by way of the West, sent in 1474 to the Portuguese, Furnham Martins, and later to Christopher Columbus. To many readers the subject of this book will suggest sensationalism, but to students the revelations made will help to solve the problem of how Columbus, who, according to the best information obtainable, was a man of no scientific learning, could possibly have conceived the ideas that eventually led to the discovery of America. Toscanelli was a learned Florentine, and Mr. Vignaud lays the facts in regard to Toscanelli before the student, who can draw his own conclusions.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish early in October "Our Lady of the Beeches," by Baroness von Hutten, a story of a romance growing out of a group of letters; "The Strongest Master," by Helen Choate Prince, the story of a young college man who falls a victim to socialistic heresies, but finally learns the folly of his ways; "Tracts Relating to the Currency of the Massachusetts Bay, 1682-1721," eighteen rare pamphlets bearing on the money question as it arose two hundred years ago, edited by Andrew McFarland Davis; "Daniel Ricketson and His Friends," a memorial of a citizen Quaker of New Bedford, a friend of Thoreau and other famous men; "Captain Craig," a book of verse, by Edwin A. Robinson; "Under Colonial Colors," a book for boys, by Everett T. Tomlinson; also, "Jesus's Way," by William De Witt Hyde, who presents the gist of Christ's teachings.

CHARLES E. GOODSPEED, Boston, Mass., will publish in October a reprint, in enlarged form, of W. E. Channing's life of "Thoreau, the Poet-Naturalist," the original edition of which was published by Roberts Brothers in 1873. Since Mr. Channing's death, his literary executor, F. B. Sanborn, has been desirous of bringing out a new and enlarged edition of the book, for which material was left by Mr. Channing. The forthcoming publication will contain about eighty pages of new material, including an introduction by Mr. Sanborn, notes, and a full index. There will be two editions—the ordinary edition, with a new etched portrait of the author, and a limited edition of 275 copies, 250 of which will be on toned French hand-made paper, with the etchings in two states. Besides the portrait of Mr. Channing, there will be five full-page etchings by Sidney L. Smith, namely, a portrait of Thoreau, after the crayon drawing by S. W. Rowse, a view of Thoreau's birthplace before the alterations, interior of Barrett's grist mill, Conantum pool, and dead leaves in the forest.

THE OFFICE OF THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY will publish August 16 the "Catalogues" volume of "The Publishers' Trade List Annual" for 1902. The "Index" volume will follow early in September. The index includes about 140,000 entries, greatly exceeding our original estimate and slightly delaying publication. Inasmuch as the index covers every book listed by the 250 publishers represented in the main volume, including the announcements sent up to August 1, we may claim that its publication a month after the volume to which it belongs will be among the rare instances of an index being published so close upon the conclusion of the final editorial work. We have just received the copies allotted for the American market of Whitaker's "Reference List of English Literature," the English counterpart of the "Publishers' Trade List Annual." Whitaker's this year contains the trade lists of 179 publishers and an index of about 800 pages, giving 135,000 references by author, title and subject. Intending subscribers are reminded that the number of copies is limited, and that after the supply is exhausted no more copies can be had.

GEORGE W. JACOBS & Co., Philadelphia, have in preparation a volume of travel by Jeremiah Zimmerman, entitled Spain and Her People;" "Ann Arbor Tales," by Karl Edwin Harriman, to be brought out uniform with the Pennsylvania and Bryn Mawr stories already published; "The Revenge of Adnah: a Tale of the Christ;" also, "Some Early Printers and their Colophons," by Joseph Spencer Kennard, which will be gotten up in sumptuous style for book collectors. They also announce a work dealing with early Colonial social life, by Edward Robins, entitled "Romances of Early America," to which we have already made reference. There will be chapters giving an account of the famous Meschianza, given in Philadelphia in the days of the British occupancy of the city, and of the love affairs of Mistress Sally Wister. Other sketches included in the volume have for their heroines Dolly Madison, Agnes Surriage, of Masachusetts; Mary Vining, the Revolutionary belle of Delaware, and Flora MacDonald, the ardent North Carolina Tory. Mr. Robins has also something to say of the men who made history in those earlier days, telling of the love affairs of Washington and Thomas Jefferson, and adding a chapter which strikes a later note in "Edwin Forrest's First Love."

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

Dr. Nicoll, the eminent English critic, said: "Gertrude Atherton is the ablest woman writer of fiction now living." Shortly before his death Harold Frederic declared her to be the only woman in contemporary literature who knew how to write a novel. "Certainly this country has produced no woman writer who approaches Mrs. Atherton," writes a Boston critic, while in San Francisco another calls it "One of the most fascinating and in some respects the most unusual book ever written by a woman."

"Its scenes and incidents are sketched with as firm and true a touch as Richard Harding Davis has ever given to some of his best work."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A SUCCESSFUL publisher is one who constantly seeks to get the best value for the least money. That's why I am a successful bookbinder. Also because I turn out the highest grade of work at from ten to twenty-five per cent. less than anyone else. How do I do it? That is the burning question amongst the trade to-day.

My answer is, "Don't ask the why and the wherefore," but send me your stamps and dummies and I will make up samples which will show the highest character of work and upon which I will give you estimates that cannot be met. My equipment and plant is the finest and one of the largest of its kind in the country. Large output and small profits are the keystones to my success. Don't take my word for these statements. Come and see for yourself.

Whitaker's Reference Catalogue.

We are now prepared to supply the "Reference Catalogue of Current English Literature," better known, perhaps, as "Whitaker's Reference List."

The work is arranged on the plan of "The Publishers' Trade List Annual," and contains recent lists of 179 of the more important English publishers. An index is prefixed to the lists containing 35,000 references to the books catalogued. It thus forms one of the most complete records of current English books accessible to the bookseller and librarian.

The work is in two volumes of about 5,000 pages, strongly bound in half leather. The price has been fixed at $5.00 net.

As the copies received for the American market are limited, we need hardly remind intending subscribers of the wisdom of placing your order without delay.

THE keynote to the theme of "The Climax" is found in the sub-title of the romance, "What might have been." The author intends it as a light, pleasing, fanciful, capering story of the climax in Aaron Burr's life as it might have been. Mr. Pidgin begs his readers to entirely disabuse their thoughts of any idea that it is to be an historical novel. He tells a rattling good story of what might have happened to this country, its people, and its institutions if Burr had been elected governor of New York at the time he aspired to that office. Burr is afterward elected to the presidential chair and becomes known throughout the world as the great President-General and a mighty conqueror—the Napoleon of the Western hemisphere.

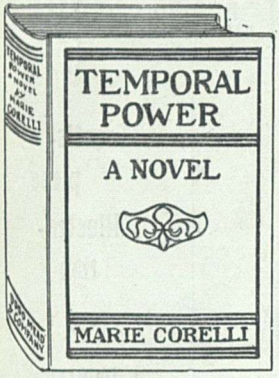
A NEW NOVEL BY

MARIE CORELLI

"Temporal Power"



A Study in Supremacy

By

MARIE CORELLI

Author of "The Master Christian," "The Sorrows of Satan," etc.

Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Company take pleasure in announcing that they have now in press, and will publish on August 30th, this important new story by Miss Corelli. The book is a singularly striking and powerful one, dealing with a subject which has never before been treated in fiction, and intimately touching upon certain topics which have for some time been uppermost in the minds of many people. While it is announced as a romance of the ruling passion, the author desires it to be known that it does not treat of the ruling passion of the Pope, but of a still more powerful potentate. This is the first story Miss Corelli has written since the publication of "The Master-Christian," and will probably be as widely discussed a book as that novel. The author, herself, says that "Temporal Power" is the strongest book she has ever written. : : : : : : : : : :
